LETTER OF LIEUT. PHILLIPS.

" HARRISON'S LANDING,

July 18, 1862.

Hyde and Dillingham left yesterday. Their resignations took effect on the 12th. Scott and I and the men except 28 assigned to Weeden moved over to Captain Martin's camp last Sunday. We act as officers under Martin, taking our turn as Officers of the Day, and the men are incorporated with his battery. Nominally the 5th Mass. Battery still exists, having its officers and non-commissioned officers, and its own muster and pay rolls, but it is a very slender existence. I cannot sign a requisition or act in any official capacity as commander, and have nothing to do with the men."

Friday July 18, 1862, on account of heavy rains which "drowned out the whole camp" and flooded the tent of Scott and Phillips, the camp of the Third Mass. Battery was moved to a hill near by, and the next day C. D. Barnard, supposed to have been killed in the battle of Gaines Mills, June 27, 1862, came down the river from Richmond among other wounded soldiers on board the steamer "Louisiana" with a flag of truce. See p. 358 C. D. Barnard.

Among other changes wrought by time, Captain A. P. Martin appeared in his new capacity of Chief of Artillery; Captain William B. Weeden having resigned and gone home.

Grows' "Journal":—"July 20, 1862. Soon after dinner Harry Simonds and Joe Knox came over to see me. Had a very pleasant time talking with them. They stopped about an hour. . . . Some more have died today with the fever. A great many are embalmed and sent to their friends."

Mason W. Page was serg't. of our detachment, William H. Baxter gunner, and George O. Proctor, Louis E. Pattison and Amos Blanchard drivers on gun in the order named. The outcome of the loss of their guns was the resignations of Lieuts. Hyde and Dillingham, leaving only Lieuts. Phillips and Scott."

NOTES OF D. HENRY GROWS.

"Friday, June 27, 1862. Went on post at 2 this morning. At 3, an order came to pack up and fall back to a hill in the rear of our old camp. Arrived there at about half past 4, and went into battery, with orders that as soon as our flying artillery passed the bridge to tear it up and open on the rebels with shrapnell and canister. After waiting two hours the artillery passed. We then tore up the bridge and waited for the rebels, but they did not make their appearance. So we limbered up and fell back about $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles, and went into battery. In about an hour the 'Secesh' opened on the Right, but were repulsed, in this way: they tried the Centre and Left, but could not break them. About 5 this afternoon they received fresh troops, and threw them on to the Left where we were stationed. For three times they tried us, and were driven back, but at the fourth time they turned our Left, and we opened upon them with canister, our troops falling back all the while. The last round we fired was at 35 yards, a double charge of canister. It mowed their ranks awfully. The order came to limber up and fall back. We did so, but they were close upon us. We lost four of our pieces and twenty-five horses. Three of our men were shot dead: Charles Barnard, Corporal Milliken, and E. F. Gustine. Seven others are either killed or taken prisoners. The bullets flew like hail. I kept up with the gun till I was knocked down by a rail into a deep ditch. I was helped out, and kept on my way looking for the caissons that were in the rear. I soon found them and sat down to rest. Saw James Tuttle: he was safe. Harry Simonds lost his piece, and was struck with a piece of shell.

About 8 o'clock we crossed the Chickahominy, and laid ourselves down to sleep.

I received a letter from my wife today during the battle!

Saturday, June 28, 1862. Got up feeling very sore, had some water to drink. I was awfully dry. My face and hands are black with powder and sweat, and I have no chance to wash.

About 8 this morning we fell back about a mile, and there found two of our guns; the other four having been taken by the rebels. Most all the men are tired out. The buildings near by are used for hospitals, and are filled with the wounded. It is an awful sight. About noon we hitched up and fell back. At Savage's Station there were a great many cars loaded with the wounded who are being moved away. The roads are lined with sick and stragglers. Got into camp about 11 o'clock. Was routed out at 3 o'clock in the morning."

Reviewing this Diary in Charlestown, Mass., October 1, 1900, Grows added the following:—

"There is one thing I did not mention: It was how the gun I worked on at Gaines Mills was saved. A bullet struck the right wheel horse, while the gun was stuck in a rut, the pain caused the horse to jump to the right, and the driver struck the off horse, and the wheels of the limber were free. And so we got out of a bad place."

NOTES OF CHARLES D. BARNARD.

FEBRUARY 1, 1901.

"I was wounded at Gaines Mills, June 27, 1862. While trying to save the gun we held, we got into the woods. The Confederates had charged 3 times on us before they got the gun. When Corporal (Albert F.) Milliken sent up the last charge to the gun, he sent word to the gunner Corporal (Charles) tense, that the horses on three of the pieces were killed, thereby preventing their removal from the field.

Our loss was four pieces, twenty-two horses and harnesses.

Corp'l A. F. Milliken shot through the head.

Private Chas. D. Barnard shot through the breast.

" E. F. Gustine shot in the breast.

" Wm. H. Ray wounded in the breast.

" John Agen wounded in the side.

" L. D. Brownell wounded in ankle.

" Richard Heyes missing, prisoner.

" E. F. Smith missing, prisoner.

After having retired from the field, crossed the Chickahominy River and encamped near General McClellan's Headquarters for the night. Amount of ammunition expended was one hundred shell and twenty-five canister.

NOTES OF LT. HYDE MAY 22, 1900.

"We were retreating towards the James River. We—our Battery—were the last to cross the bridge below Dr. Gaines's house on the way to cross the Chickahominy. This bridge was built of logs and planks and was about twenty feet wide and about thirty feet long. After we had passed over that bridge our guns were placed 'in Battery,' facing towards the enemy who were coming that way in pursuit of our army, to hold them in check if necessary. After all the troops had passed over, the colonel of the infantry regiment was ordered to destroy the bridge.

During the work of destruction I discerned coming down the hill at great speed several mounted men, whom by my glass I made out to be members of the Signal Corps. I at once told the Colonel in charge to have the planks of the bridge replaced as members of the Signal Corps were coming down the hill like lightning. He at first doubted it and running in groups of two or three or alone, each one looking out for himself, while 200 yards in front stretched the long line of rebel infantry, which had formed between us and the woods, their red flags flying, and their muskets sending the bullets flying round our heads after all the infantry had left.

I unlimbered and fired one round of canister at a regiment with a red flag within less than three hundred yards. We could see the gaps made at each discharge instantly filled up by fresh troops, and still on they came.

Reluctantly, we limbered up and commenced our retreat. I got both my pieces off the field down to the bottom of the hill (and all the caissons got off safely,) and none too soon, for at the right piece, more exposed than the others, down went all the horses (four) and Corporal Albert F. Milliken fell, shot through the head, then Private Edward F. Gustine, at Peacock's piece, shot in the neck and breast, Private Charles D. Barnard shot in the side, then Wm. H. Ray fell at Smith's piece with a bullet through his shoulder, but managed to get off the field.

So down the hill we went at full gallop, but before we reached the bottom Peacock's and Simonds's pieces were left, with the horses dead in the traces. George F. Manchester one of the drivers on Sergt. Peacock's piece had his off horse shot but cut his nigh one loose and escaped. When he got to the bottom of the hill he took up a wounded officer in front of him, but in passing under the fire of our Reserve Artillery, one of their shells blew the officer's head off, and Manchester said he felt frightened for the first time. So far both of my guns were safe, but at the bottom of the hill, a fence stopped us a little, and while passing through the gap we experienced the hottest fire of all.

The rebels by this time lined the top of the hill, and poured a murderous fire into our retreating soldiers. As Blake's piece went through the gap, down went one horse with a bullet in his jaw, throwing his rider, but the other horses pulled him through and saved the gun. As Page's piece

NOTES OF CHARLES D. BARNARD

February 1, 1901

"I was wounded at Gaines Mill, June 27, 1862. While trying to save the gun we held, we got into the woods. The Confederates had charged 3 times on us before they got the gun. When Corporal (Albert) Milliken sent up the last charge to the gun, he sent word to the gunner Corporal (Charles) Macomber, that that was all the canister he had. Corporal Macomber told us that when we had fired he should give the order 'by hand to the rear', as we only had one horse standing, he being the nigh pole horse, the other 5 horses were down, having been shot.

As soon as we had fired, the order was given-

'By hand to the rear!'

We each sprang to our posts.

The rest of the gunners ran to the trail.

No. 2, William H. Ray had a ball pass through him.

No. 3, was myself. The ball entered the right thigh coming out ½ inch from the spine. The force of the ball threw me over the trail into No. 4 man's place. I got up standing on one leg, and said to Corporal Macomber:-

'They have shot my right leg off., Charley!'

At that time William Ray came running up with a sponge staff, and Corporal Macomber said:-

'Billy, you are wounded.'

Billy said no, but upon unbuttoning his jacket the blood began to show, and Billy says:-

'They can't have this sponge staff to use on us.'

This was the only sponge staff we had left. So he took it, and when he came to the ditch in going to the rear, he made 3 pieces of it and threw it into the ditch.

Then Corporal Macomber came to me, and threw one arm over his neck and he tried to take me to the rear, and as we were trying to go to the rear he said to me:-

'Help yourself all you can, Charley for there lays poor Corporal Millikin.'

We both looked down at him. The ball had struck him in the head, killing him instantly. There was no mark of blood on him. Corporal Macomber and myself were the 2 last men of our Battery that ever saw Corporal Millikin.

We had not gone 50 feet from him when a ball struck me in my left foot and stopped under my knee, the force of the ball throwing me out of Corporal Macomber's arms to the ground. He bent over me and said:- 'Charley, I am going to throw you over my shoulder.'

I said, 'No, Charley, there is only one of us to be killed, and I am that man. You run around the foot of the hill, under the protection of our heavy guns that are on the hill.'

'No he says, 'I am going to shoulder you.'—

I fainted away from the loss of blood, and he got to the Battery and reported me killed.

Edwin R. Studley G.A.R. Post 112

Years ago when we had a horse and most others had we used to go to Mr. Studley's house to leave our to take the trolley to Weymouth Fair grounds, he near Queen Anne's Corner. Father would ask per- to do so and Mr. Studley would be waiting for Pa the horse and help him put the horse in the stall we would be looking for that trolley. r. Studley was a handsome man with white flowing d a beautiful smile, and how he loved our horse s patting and kind affection, and how we kids l for him on Memorial Day!

Richard Winslow and Albert Winslow were my father's who fought in the Civil War also, one in the 54th t and the other in the 45th Regiment. o not remember my father telling stories that his d him, but their stories must have been interesting, different Regiment, certainly one for the books!

of Quincy. It was an old Stoddard house; Henry Stoddard was last of that name to occupy it. Capt Peter Sears the Revolutionary officer and his wife lived here as told in Volume III, pp 53-56, this Series. Edwin A Studley, a Civil War veteran and son of David Studley, built a house about forty years ago (E A Studley, 1902 map) just east of the Stoddard place. It is owned by Fred Fredrickson.

"Across the street the Robert Lincoln house (street named for him - 1857 map), later occupied by Capt and Mrs Augustus Hatch, was owned for some years by Elijah Clapp."

RICHARDSON'S MILL, MOUNT BLUE.

"The George Richardson place, built and occupied by him for over forty years, was purchased recently by Carl Fredrickson."

"Mr and Mrs Frederick Mackay have erected a bungalow recently across from the Richardson place."

"A little further down the road is the site of the old Bartlett Barrell place (1831 map) which has been gone for seventy five years. Mr Barrell died in 1853 aged eighty four years."

"The Charles D Barnard house a short way below was moved to Scituate."
(It appears on 1879 map and not on 1902 map.)

On Lincoln Street from Bryant's Corner toward Mt Blue Street, "the place owned and occupied by Frank Osborne was formerly that of Wilbur Nichols; half of it was occupied by Henry Damon when he returned from California. He ran a small shoe shop forty years ago here."

You ask me to furnish two comrades that seen me wounded in my left leg or an officer of my company, Now that I cant, for all of my company had left the battle field, but the one in whose arms I was and was shot while in his arms and he is a Deserter, I do not know where to find him, the only thing that I can do is to refer to the Hospital records of Camden Street General Hospital, Baltimore, Md., August to December 1862. Dr. Colbrun attended me and Mrs Mary McClan was the head nurse. Casper P. Mason was an assistant nurse and tended to my wounds most of the time, the left leg healed up too soon and then broke out again, the wound shows for itself you can trace the ball from the foot to the knee. Corporal Charles Macomber is the man who had me in his arms at the time I was shot in the left leg; soon after that battle he deserted and I dont know where to find him and none of the company know where he is.

~~He has been treated, during the period since his discharge from the service, by the following physicians:~~

ELAINE B. TRUDEAU
Registrar

State of Massachusetts }
County of Bristol } ss.

On this Thirteenth day of January in the year of our Lord One thousand eight hundred and Sixty Three, personally appeared before me Francis L. Porter Clerk of the Police Court of the City of New Bedford within and for the County and State aforesaid Charles J. Barnard aged Twenty four years, a resident of New Bedford aforesaid, who being duly sworn according to law declares that he is the identical Charles J. Barnard who enlisted in the service of the United States at New Bedford aforesaid on the First day of October A.D. 1861, first as an Artificer and afterwards served as a Private (there being now Artificers then allowed) in Company "E" Fifth Massachusetts Artillery Commanded by John B. Hyde First Lieutenant Commanding, in the way for the suppression of the rebellion 1861, 1862 & 1863, and was honorably discharged on the Fifteenth day of November in the year 1862, at Baltimore in the State of Maryland, as will appear by his certificate of discharge,

Jan: 14/63.

which he was afterwards discharged
as aforesaid. That since his said discharge he has resided at said
New Bedford but has not been engaged in any occupation, being totally disabled by his said wound and the effects of the same: That he was examined preparatory to making this Application, by John H. Mackie of said New Bedford,
Examining Surgeon for the Pension Department, on the Tenth day of January 1863, who has forwarded the result of said Examination to the Commissioner of Pensions.

He makes this declaration
for the purpose of procuring the pension to which he may be entitled under the Act of Congress July 14, 1862,
And he hereby authorizes Hanson
Borden of New Bedford Mass. to prosecute his claim and procure a pension Certificate.

Charles D. Barnard

Also personally appeared Robert A.
Dillingham and George A. Wood both residents of New Bedford aforesaid herewith presenting that while in the service aforesaid and in the line of his duty, to-wit: at the battle of "Gaines Hill" in the State of Virginia, on the Twenty-seventh day of June A.D. 1862, he received the following wound, viz: While heaving at the wheel of the gun for the purpose of getting the same from the field,

the Artillery horses having been shot, he was struck by a musket ball in the lower part of ^{the} thigh which passed upward through the thigh bone coming out at the back in the upper part of the hip shattering the bone and severing the leading cord of the right leg, from the effects of which his right leg has become stiff and has perished away so as to be entirely useless, and compel him to go entirely with crutches.
That in consequence of the said wound
he was taken prisoner at the said battle and was carried to Richmond, and was afterwards paroled, and was conveyed to the U. S. Army General Hospital in Camden St. Baltimore, from otherwise known, or former First Lieutenant of Company "E" (Massachusetts Fifth Artillery at the time of the battle of Gaines Hill and previously; that he is well acquainted with Charles S. Barnard above named, who was a member of said Company, who enlisted at or about the time stated

by him in his foregoing Application and who was wounded while in the service of the United States at the said battle while in the line of his duty, substantially as stated in the said Application which has been read in my hearing. His right leg is totally disabled by the said wound,
it having been shortened to a considerable extent, and stiffened, and shrunken, and perished, so as to be of no service whatever to him, and he is consequently obliged to depend entirely upon crutches for locomotion.
